Superintendent's travel pay criticized

School officials haggle, bicker at Saturday meet

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.

A Hancock County School Board member's objection to the district superintendent of education's travel expenses sparked haggling and bickering among officials at a Saturday meeting.

Tommy Shaw, a board member, initially objected to Randolph receiving $1,068 for February expenses which include $743 for an American Association of School Administrators meeting in Atlantic City N.J. and the remainder for travel within the school district.

The board agreed to pay the Atlantic City expenses with Shaw and Johnny Banks, a board member, objecting.

Banks, who was apparently the only board member siding with Randolph, said he objected to the board action because the entire amount Randolph requested was not included in the board action.

Later in the meeting the board unanimously authorized payment of all docket items, including Randolph's travel expenses, except a $1,190 payment to attorney Robert Drake of Hattiesburg.

Monvel Cuevas, board president, noted Drake is representing the school board in a civil suit filed by State Attorney General Bill Allain seeking funds allegedly mispent by the group in repairing Gulfview Elementary School in Lakeshore.

The school was damaged by a tornado about two years ago.

Cuevas said the board maintains liability coverage with CNA Insurance Co. underwritten by Hancock Insurance Agency in Bay St. Louis, but the company has not yet reimbursed the school district for some $24,000 in legal services.

He reported Drake advised the board not to pay him the $1,190 until the insurance company reimburses the district.

Regarding the superintendent's travel expenses, Randolph said he has reduced his travel expenditures and did not attend a recent three-day Mississippi Association of Educators convention in Jackson.

Shaw said Randolph's $30,000 annual salary was enough without travel reimbursement.

Randolph stated, "I know the board feels I can do things without being educated."

He criticized the board members because only one attended a recent State School Board Association meeting in Gulfport.

"...you are losing out, especially about the chain of command in the school district which was discussed at the meeting," Randolph stated.

"For instance, a school board member in the principal's office. A board member shouldn't talk with a principal in a personnel matter," the superintendent said.

He reported the Atlantic City conference stressed the importance of computer education in high school.

Randolph then cited the board's recent decision to rebuild the district-owned Hancock North Central High School principal's home near the school.

The facility was destroyed in a recent fire and Randolph has objected to the board's decision to rebuild.

Cuevas warned, "You're getting off the subject."

Shaw told Randolph, "You're charging (for reimbursement) to go to Hancock North Central."

Randolph replied, "You're charging to get to board meetings!"

He added the board should "sit in my office for a few days" to appreciate his work instead of dwelling on "specific individual problems."

Banks interjected, "We need to get off this stuff and get back to education."

Cuevas asked for a vote on approving the Atlantic City trip, but Randolph stated, "Hold it, there's more discussion!"

Randolph again began criticizing the board for authorizing the house rebuilding project which he said would cost at least $51,600 including all architectural fees.

Trio charged with weapon, marijuana possession at ammo plant open house

By ELLIS CUEVAS

Three were arrested Saturday morning during open house activities at the Mississippi Army Ammunition Plant at National Space Technology Laboratories.

They were charged with possession of fire arms and marijuana said Hancock County Sheriff Ronald Peterson Saturday afternoon.

The trio were arrested by Army plant security personnel and apparently possessed a small amount of marijuana, a .22-caliber pistol, a .44-caliber magnum revolver, ammunition, two daggers, combat boots, gas masks, and a camouflage makeup, Hancock County Investigator Alvin Ladner said that day.

Ladner stated the three arrested are, Joseph Roszczyński, 24; Edward Roszczyński, 23; and Paula Roszczyńska, 21, all of Route 1, Box 312, Pearl River, La.

Joseph Roszczyński is apparently a parole violator in connection with a Louisiana cocaine charge and the guns were reported to be his brother and sister's, Ladner reported.

Lawmen suspected the sibling trio were terrorists, but this was later ruled out, Ladner said.

Justice Court Judge Horatio Frierson set bond for the misdemeanor charges at $1,000 each for possession of concealed weapons and marijuana.

Assisting Army plant security were Ladner; Hancock Deputy Harold Heine; Trooper Harold F. Jolder of the State Highway Patrol; and T. P. Naylor, senior highway patrol district investigator.

Lt. Col. Walter Busbee, plant commander, was unavailable for comment Saturday afternoon.

Three arson cases ready for grand jury hearing

By BREARD SNELLINGS

Three separate cases of alleged arson in Hancock County went before justice court judges this past week, according to Hancock County Sheriff's Department Arson Investigator Ed Frloux.

All three cases were turned over to the Hancock County Grand Jury, after preliminary hearings. The grand jury convenes again in July.

Ishmael Ayo of Chalmette, La. appeared before District 3 Justice Court Judge Marion Anderson Thursday for allegedly setting three woods fires in north Hancock County. The fires were all set on Feb. 18 of this year.

His case was turned over the grand jury and he is presently out on $5,000 property bond.

Larry O. Williams of Pearl River, La. appeared before District 5 Justice Court Judge John Chevis for allegedly setting fire to and burning down a home on Third Street in Shoreline Park on Feb. 2 of this year.

The case was turned over to the grand jury and Williams is now out on $5,000 property bond.

Danny Perrot of Bay St. Louis also appeared before Judge Chevis for allegedly burning down Apartment D of Treutel Apartments at 208 Carroll St. on Feb. 14.

The case is being handled in part by the Bay St. Louis Fire Department.

Perrot's case was turned over to the grand jury and he is free on $5,000 property bond.

The three cases were and are being investigated by the Hancock County Sheriff's Department with cooperation from the State Fire Marshall's office.

The Ayo case is also being investigated by the State Game and Fish Commission and the State Forestry Service.

Frloux stresses that anyone who wishes to burn trash on their property must first obtain a permit from the city fire department if they live in Waveland, Bay St. Louis or Diamondhead.

Also, to burn land on your property, you must obtain a permit from the State Forestry Commission and make sure the fire stays on your property.

Borg-Warner Chemicals to dedicate facility

Borg-Warner Chemicals, Inc. Wednesday will hold official dedication ceremonies for its $36-million Baymar Plant in Hancock County's Port Bienvenue Industrial Park.

The dedication ceremony will take place at 2:30 p.m. The featured guest speaker will be Mississippi Governor William Winter.

Baymar began operations in 1982. It is a plastics production plant occupying 205 acres of land and employing 50 people.

Acrylonitrile-Butadiene-Styrene (ABS) plastic is produced at Baymar. ABS is one of the key substances used in the manufacturing of major household appliances, automotive and telecommunications products, personal computers, business machines power tools and other products that require a durable plastic at an economical price.

Some of Borg-Warner Chemicals' customers include Ford, AMC, Chrysler, GM, Western Electric, Atari, Coloco, Sun Beam, Hoover, Black and Decker and Whirlpool.

Baymar incorporates some of the most modern safety features in the industry; it also operates in complete harmony with the environment.

According to Plant Manager Leo Kowal, Baymar complies with all regulations dealing with employees, environment and energy conservation.

"Employee safety and health care are key areas of the company's efforts to improve the quality of life," says Kowal.

Baymar utilizes the most advanced pollution control technology available and does not discharge waste water into the nearby Pearl River.

ABS plastic resists stains and returns to a deep gloss with the wipe of a cloth.

Considered chiefly responsible for the growing popularity of decorative painting, Ms. Hauser is widely acknowledged as the leading authority on tole and decorative painting in America. She brings to her 13-part television series 20 years of experience in teaching decorative painting. In the series she shows viewers how to paint daisies, lemons, lilacs, strawberries and roses with both oil and acrylics on a variety of surfaces, including wood, canvas, furniture, fabric and glass. ## Hancock girl charged in trucker kidnapping

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.

A Pearlinton girl is among three charged in the apparent kidnapping of a Florida trucker at Mississippi's Hancock County Welcome Center on Friday.

Investigator Alvin Ladner of the Hancock Sheriff's Department Saturday reported the 16-year-old girl was arrested Friday in Pearlinton, charged with kidnapping and released on $10,000 bond.

"Due to the fact that this is a capital crime, the girl will be treated by the courts as an adult," he stated.

In addition, two Pearl River, La. residents both will face kidnapping, armed robbery and grand larceny charges here stemming from the incident, Ladner said.

He said the two are now in a St. Tammany Parish jail charged with attempted murder.

"We feel the two will not waive extradition and return to Hancock Monday to face charges here," Ladner stated.

The two are William J. Sharp, 45, and Narcille B. Rovira, 38, the investigator reported.

Ladner said Sharp reportedly owns a truck stop in the Slidell area.

"Joseph Brown of Lakeland, Fla. and driver of a tractor-trailer rig for Florida-New Orleans Express was allegedly abducted at the welcome center just after midnight Thursday morning by the two," he stated.

"Brown was apparently forced by Sharp armed with a .44 caliber magnum revolver to get into their car," Ladner said based on a statement by Brown.

The three then traveled along Hwy. 604 where they stopped and apparently robbed Brown of $110, the investigator reported.

"They allegedly told him they were going to kill him and going to pick up someone else to witness it," he said.

Ladner explained the three apparently stopped at a mobile home in Pearlinton where the girl joined them.

The four then traveled along US-90 into Louisiana where Rovira apparently told Sharp to stop for the killing, the investigator said.

When they stopped, Brown apparently overpowered Sharp, obtained the weapon and ran into a wooded area.

"Sharp then apparently got a .38 caliber revolver, chased Brown briefly and fired six shots. The three then drove away, Brown is uninjured and at a nearby house he telephoned the St. Tammany Sheriff's Department," Ladner stated.

The investigator said Brown identified the two whom he knew from the truck stop and the St. Tammany department issued an all-points bulletin for their arrest.

"Within 30 minutes they spotted the car and arrested Sharp and Rovira possessing a .38 caliber revolver with six spent cartridges," Ladner stated.

The girl was apparently returned to Pearlinton before the two were nabbed, he said.

The tractor-trailer rig was discovered with all the tires flat at Sharp's establishment, Ladner added.

He said the motive for the incident has not yet been established.

New ornamental pepper 15 years in development

By JIM PERRY

Horticulturist
Mississippi Cooperative
Extension Service

"Candlelight" is a beautiful new ornamental pepper developed by a retired professor in Coventry, Conn.

John Scarchuk, who taught in the University of Connecticut's Department of Plant Science until his retirement three years ago, spent 15 years developing Candlelight.

Scarchuk decided on an ornamental pepper because he had been encouraged to work on less well-known plants, he said.

"I decided to get into something not as familiar to most people and improve it," he said.

Candlelight, a 1968 Bronze medal All-America Selections winner, is an edible pepper that bears an average of 100 or more slender peppers per plant. Against the background of attractive dark green foliage the light green, thickly clustered fruits really show off. True excitement, however, comes when they all turn red within a few days of each other.

The plants are low and spreading, averaging 10 to 12 inches in height. Scarchuk said this is a quality he worked hard to get.

"I was trying to get it into a smaller form, making a more compact plant that would not be taller like other ornamentals," Scarchuk said.

He also successfully obtained thickly clustered peppers. The peppers are the diameter of a pencil and grow up one and one-half inches in length.

If you have ever grown ornamental peppers, you may have ventured to taste some of the fruit. Very likely you became quite excited about cooling the exceptionally hot bitter taste in your mouth.

All-America Selections staffers, however, took a chance and tasted the Candlelight peppers and found them to be much milder in flavor than the hot ornamentals, even through Scarchuk's strain was developed only from hot varieties.

Gardeners who have had a chance to grow Candlelight are enthusiastic about it. The little bright green peppers stand in thick clusters very upright. They turn a vibrant red at maturity.

Candlelight is attractive planted en masse or in a pot or window box.

Ornamental peppers are among the most durable and carefree plants for flower garden color and Candlelight is especially so. The vigorous plants have the strength to continue producing peppers until frost.

The seeds of Candlelight germinate in 10 to 12 days when started indoors at 70 to 75 degrees F. To have budded plants ready to set outside in late spring, start the seeds about 10 weeks prior to the first frost-free date. Plant in full sun as ornamental peppers are very heat- and sun-resistant.

It's Time You Got To Know Us!

MEET CARMEN MONTGOMERY

Carmen Montgomery is the head cook here at Hancock General. She is responsible for cooking breakfast and lunch for patients, employees and visitors. A lifelong resident of Bay St. Louis, Carmen has been here at Hancock General for the past 10 years, and resides in Bay St. Louis with her three children. She and the other dietary employees have to prepare meals for four different menus. Depending upon their physician's orders, patients choose their meals from either a regular, diabetic, soft bland or low sodium diet. Within the limits of those diets, patients are given the opportunity to select their meals. A brand new patient tray delivery system has been purchased and will be instituted sometime in April. We think this new system is worth it, and we think Carmen is worth it, too. Because she and the other dietary employees know that the better the food looks and tastes, within the limits imposed by the physician, the sooner the patient can gather the strength to get well and go home. And that's one of the main objectives here at Hancock General, your community hospital that cares. And we think it's time you got to know us!

POINT OF LAW Mississippi State Bar

(Prepared by the Mississippi State Bar. Some legal rights may vary from locality to locality. Always consult an attorney when in doubt about your rights.)

What are my rights as a storeowner if I have sold merchandise on credit to a customer who files bankruptcy?

A: If a storeowner has sold goods on credit, and the purchaser files bankruptcy without having paid for the goods, the storeowner generally has the same rights in the bankruptcy proceedings as any other general unsecured creditor.

He must file a claim with the bankruptcy court, and will receive payment from the bankrupt's unsecured assets along with all other general creditors.

He does not usually have a special right to retake the goods.

However, a storeowner may be entitled to additional protection in certain limited circumstances. If a storeowner has sold goods to a buyer on credit and then discovers that the buyer was insolvent, the storeowner may reclaim the merchandise if he sends to the buyer a written demand for return of the goods. The demand must be sent within ten days of the date that the buyer purchased the goods.

This law also provides a limited protection in bankruptcy for sellers who have sold goods to someone within ten days of the time that bankruptcy is filed.

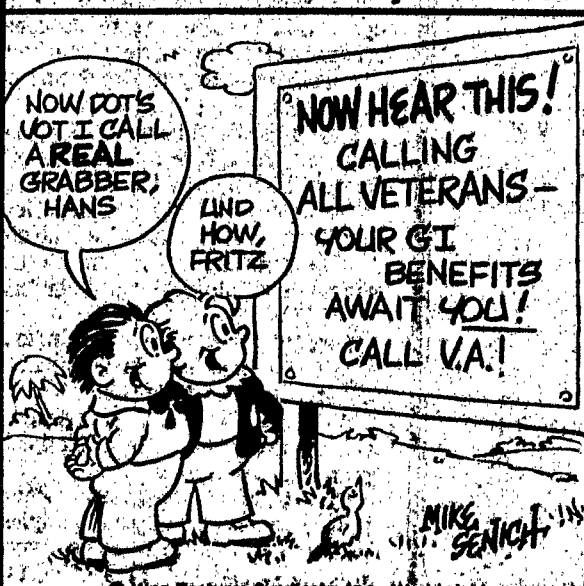

Thus, if a merchant sells goods on March 1 to a buyer who files bankruptcy on March 5, the seller can reclaim the goods by making a written demand for their return by March 11.

Aside from this protection, a storeowner who wants to be able to reclaim goods sold on credit must keep a security interest in the goods sold. He must enter into a written agreement with the buyer which provides that the seller will have a security interest in the goods to secure payment of the purchase price.

The seller must also then file what is called a financing statement in the appropriate state or local office indicating that he has a security interest in the goods.

If these two steps are taken the seller will be able to claim priority in the goods even if the buyer files bankruptcy.

Quotables by CUEVAS

There are some 250 residents of Hancock County who have not yet filed for their homestead exemptions according to Edward Murtagh, Hancock County assessor-tax collector.

We would like to urge all home owners, if they qualify for homestead exemption to check and see if they have filed since January 1st.

The reason for homeowners to file for Homestead Exemptions is because it just about cuts property taxes in half when they are qualified.

The deadline for filing is April 1st, and there are only a few days left.

Many folks are preparing for the Community Easter Sunrise Services to be held Easter morning in front of Christ Episcopal Church, Beach Boulevard, Bay St. Louis.

The services are co-sponsored by the Bay-Waveland Pastor's Conference and the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce.

This is a lovely setting for such a service and numerous pastors are scheduled to participate, as well as chorus members. There will be coffee and donuts following the service in Virginia Hall of Christ Episcopal.

The services will begin at 6 a.m., and we hope to see you there.

The Hancock County Chamber of Commerce's Morning Edition Coffee will be on Thursday, March 31, 7:30 a.m. at the LaVilla Restaurant, Choctaw Plaza Shopping Center, Waveland.

The guest speaker will be Bill Benson, a representative of the Mississippi Sheriff Boy's Ranch at Columbus.

Several years ago, we visited the ranch with Hancock Sheriff Ronald Peterson and were very impressed with the facility.

We are hoping many persons will attend, so they can hear the fine job this facility is doing for our young people who have been provided with a home.

We have marked our calendar for this event and hope you will do the same.

Many folks are talking about the new directional signs for our three libraries.

This is very nice, and we want to thank the sponsors for their assistance with our fine library system in Hancock County.

Wednesday will be the big day at Port Bienville for the dedication ceremonies of Borg-Warner Chemicals. Borg-Warner Chemicals has been in production since last Fall at the Hancock facility.

Mississippi Gov. William Winter is scheduled as the guest speaker for the dedication.

The event begins at 2:30 p.m. at the plant which is located on a 205-acre site at the industrial park.

The plant produces a form of plastic pellets which are in wide use in manufacturing.

Borg-Warner has been a good addition to Hancock County's industrial field and we are hoping they will have a great dedication.

We know many of the employees at Borg-Warner, and in conversations, they tell us they are a very happy in being associated with them.

BEAUTIFICATION GROUP MEETS—Chuck Walters, right, addresses members of the Bay St. Louis Beautification Committee on the state's role and regulations regarding the medians of US-90. Walters, a representative of the Mississippi State Highway Commission and John L. Souge, State Manager Roadside Development explained the types of trees and shrubs allowable on highways and distance requirements. A suggested plan for beautification of the medians in Bay St. Louis will be prepared by the state for the committee to study. Funding for the purchase of trees and shrubs will have to come from local sources. Walters did say the state would prune and trim existing trees and shrubs and apply fertilizer if it is supplied. ### Senator Thad Cochran

SPECIAL REPORT:

Impact of Agriculture

As a member of the Senate Agriculture and Appropriations committees, a significant amount of my time and effort is directed toward developing legislation and policies that will improve the farm economy of our state and nation.

Why is this important? Because agriculture and related economic activity is the bedrock of our nation's economy and the foundation upon which other economic endeavors are largely based.

The food and fiber our farmers produce, the wood products, our forests, yield, and the vast network of processing, transportation and marketing add up to millions of jobs and billions of dollars of income for Americans.

Nearly 17 million people in our country are employed directly or indirectly as a result of agriculture.

In Mississippi, while our farmers are struggling with severe problems brought on by low prices, heavy debt loads, and uncertain weather, the importance of agriculture to our state's economy cannot be overstated.

The value of our agricultural and forestry crops last year in Mississippi totaled almost $3 billion — about one-sixth of the total economic activity in our state. When you include related industry and commerce, experts tell us that about one third of the total business activity, in dollar terms is generated by the agricultural economy.

For example, forestry and related wood industry accounts for one in every five manufacturing, or industrial jobs in Mississippi. Much of our transportation system and port activity involves handling agricultural and forestry products.

As chairman of the Senate Appropriations subcommittee on agriculture, I am very concerned that programs important to our farm economy, in particular, and the overall welfare of our entire population, be continued on a sound basis at adequate funding levels.

You might be interested to know that total U.S. Department of Agriculture spending in Mississippi amounted to over $658 million in the 1982 fiscal year, and is expected to be more than $678 million this year, USDA reports.

This includes Farmers Home Administration programs, rural development, food and nutrition, research and development, and other programs administered by the Department of Agriculture at the local, state and national level.

We have been working personally with farmers in our state on programs involving Farmers Home loan problems, export development to sell more of our crops and improve prices, as well as rural electrification, soil and water conservation, our fishing industries and rural housing.

Because of our favorable climate, and soil and water resources, we are able to produce a wide range of food and fiber products — everything from cotton to catfish. Soybeans, rice, wheat, dairy, poultry and livestock products help fill the supermarket shelves and dinner tables of Americans and many others around the world.

If we are, indeed, the best-fed and best-clothed country in the world, it is due to the hard work and diligent effort put forth each year by our farmers and those in related business and industry.

I am convinced that keeping our agricultural economy strong and stable should be a high national priority, for both our farmers and consumers' well-being.

News from the Governor

VICE-PRESIDENTIAL VISIT

Vice president George Bush will be one of several distinguished guests at the Conference on Jobs and Skills for the Future in Jackson April 11-13.

The conference, which was announced by Gov. William Winter recently, is sponsored by the Appalachian Regional Commission (ARC) and will address the need to maintain a labor force with developed skills in the Appalachian region of the United States.

This conference is designed to address problems confronting our jobs and skills programs in order to make the region and its people competitive in the post-recession economy," said Winter, who serves as state's co-chairman for ARC.

"Hopefully, many solutions found to Appalachian's problems will have application to national problems now receiving major attention from the Administration and Congress," he said.

Bush, scheduled to speak during a special plenary session Tuesday afternoon, will discuss the Reagan Administration's views on training for employment opportunities for the future.

Attending the three-day event will be more than 300 specially invited participants from all of the 13 ARC states, which include Ohio, Alabama, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Virginia, Kentucky, Maryland, West Virginia, New York and Mississippi.

The conference, to be held at the Holiday Inn Downtown, will be divided into four workshops, addressing the areas of future jobs in Appalachia, directions for vocational training, state training in support of economic development and improving basic skills. A governor and a moderator, considered a leader in the program area, will chair each session.

Working with each governor and moderator will be a resource professional, who has prepared a briefing paper, and four respondents representing business, labor, the federal government and state government. Each panel will produce recommendations for consideration by all participants on the final day of the conference.

Recommendations are expected to include actions which the commission can initiate with its own resources and those which it can encourage other federal agencies and public or private organizations to pursue.

Registration for the conference will begin at 2 p.m. on April 11 followed by a reception and dinner that evening. Robert E. Coleman, chairman of the board for Riegel Textile Corporation in Greenville, S.C., will discuss private sector perspectives at the dinner.

An opening plenary session will be held the next morning with Winifred A. Pizzano, ARC federal co-chairman, presiding. Issue presentations addressing the structure of the Appalachian economy, "bases" for Appalachian development, and training implications of the changing economy will be made, respectively, by Ronald Jonash, senior consultant for Arthur D. Little, Inc., in Cambridge, Mass.; Dr. Monroe Newman, head of the Department of Economics at Penn State University; and Dr. Pat Choate, senior policy analyst for economics at TRW, Inc.

Participants will then divide into the workshops. Following Bush's address on Tuesday will be a reception at the Governor's Mansion and a dinner. Mississippi humorist Jerry Clower will entertain. A closing plenary session will be held the final day of the conference with Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W.Va., presenting the legislative perspective of the commission. Workshop reports will be given by each moderator followed by responses from Ms. Pizzano and attending governors.

Society to Prevent

Blindness offers Home Eye Test for Adults

A do-it-yourself Home Eye Test for Adults that will enable people to determine if they are seeing as well as they should has just been launched by the National Society to Prevent Blindness (NSPB).

The Society, marking its 75th anniversary this year, is the nation's oldest voluntary health agency engaged in sight conservation.

"Prevent Blindness estimates that today there are more than 10 million Americans over 25 years old who have lost some vision. It is important that people stop taking their eyes for granted and have them checked periodically to prevent loss of sight," according to Frank W. Newell, M.D., NSPB president.

The Home Eye Test for Adults provides three individual tests — for distance vision, for near vision, and for macular degeneration, which affects the ability to read and see fine details in sharp focus.

Developed with the advice of some of the nation's leading ophthalmologists who serve on the agency's board and committees, the easy-to-follow, illustrated kit may be ordered from National Society to Prevent Blindness, Mississippi Affiliate, 115 Broadmoor Drive, Jackson, MS 39206. The fee of one dollar ($1) in cash, check or money order, covers postage and handling.

"The majority who fail any part of this Home Eye Test may only require glasses or a change in their prescription if they already wear them," Dr. Newell points out, "but the test can warn of more serious eye problems such as glaucoma, cataract or macular degeneration."

The kit contains an Amster grid — a chart with black horizontal and vertical lines on a white background — regarded as a sensitive form of screening for macular degeneration.

NSPB recommends a professional eye exam even for those who have passed the test if they have additional signs of possible eye problems such as double vision; impression of a 'skin' over their eyes; trouble adjusting to darkened rooms, as at the movies; see halos around lights or tiny moving dark spots or 'wiggles'.

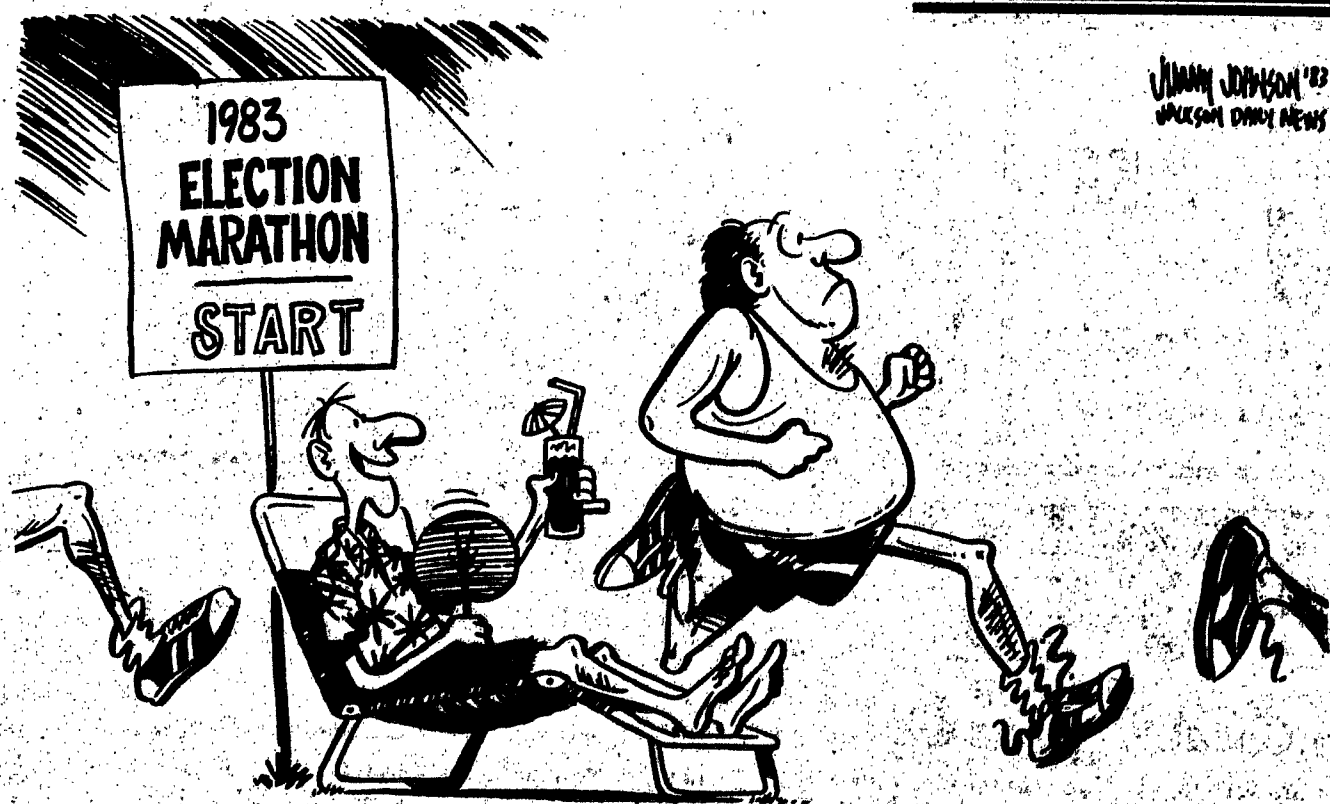

This is the third home eye test now available from the National Society to Prevent Blindness and its affiliates. The Home Eye Test for Preschoolers, introduced in 1972, has passed the nine million mark in distribution, alerting parents to vision problems of children.

Last July, the Society's 10-minute TV Eye Test for adults made its nationwide debut on NBC's "Today Show."

Since then it has been offered to television viewers by local stations in many parts of the country.

The TV Eye Test, permitting viewers to test for visual acuity and peripheral or side vision on their home screens, was developed by eye specialists at Stanford University Medical Center.

Established in 1908, the National Society is the oldest voluntary health agency nationally engaged in preventing blindness through community service programs, public and professional education and research. The Mississippi Affiliate was founded in 1961.

County Agent's Notes

By John Smith

INSECT DAMAGE

An insect known as phylloxera can be one of the most damaging to pecans early in the season. Damage often is done before a grower realizes a problem, when it's too late to treat for this pest.

Phylloxera are small sucking insects similar to aphids or plant lice. They may cause swellings or galls on leaves, tender parts and nuts that measure up to an inch in diameter in late spring.

If you experienced problems with this pest last year, insecticides are needed this year. Insecticides are effective only on the crawler stage. Once the insects have entered their galls, it's too late to control. Apply the insecticides when the buds are bursting and the first leaves are showing. If control measures are not used, serious crop loss may result.

Proper timing of the application is essential. Equipment must be set correctly, and the insecticide must be forced to the top of the tree to insure good coverage from top to bottom. Poor coverage may mean severe damage.

Homeowners may use a malathion solution for control. Commercial applicators have other choices. Read and observe precautions and usage patterns before using insecticides.

For more information on controlling phylloxera and other insects and diseases, ask for publications available at the County Extension Office, 504 N. Main Ave., Bay St. Louis.

GARDEN TIME

March and April are big planting times for the vegetable garden. Some early vegetables are already started, but these months are prime time for planting most of the vegetables that will go into jars and the freezer.

Early vegetables, including onions, cabbage, lettuce, greens and beets need to be fertilized with additional nitrogen to push them along while the soil is still cool.

Beets, radishes, lettuce and spinach that were seeded directly into the garden row may need thinning to give enough space for fast growth.

If you want sweet corn by the Fourth of July, March is the time to plant. The earlier the sweet corn matures, the better your chances of it being free of worms.

If you plan to use a herbicide to control weeds this year, check to see if it is approved for use on the vegetables you plan to grow. Remember, mulching is a good alternative to cultivating and using herbicides to control garden weeds.

You want to be sure to keep a copy of the Extension Garden Tabloid handy to answer all your gardening questions. We have a copy at the Extension Office. Share your copy with your neighbors, relatives and friends.

FARMWEEK

On Monday, March 28, Farmweek takes a look at how cattle producer N.F. Yates of Carroll County is feeding out his cattle to provide additional markets. Reporter Helen Brahan features Yates' cattle operation at 7:30 p.m., over at the Mississippi Educational Television Network.

3-WHEELER SAFETY Three-wheelers are the latest thing in off-the-road vehicles. They are helpful to hunters and good for chores around the farm. When operating properly, they can be just as safe as a truck.

Unfortunately, there is a lot of misuse of three-wheelers by careless operators which ends up in serious accidents and sometimes death.

Three-wheelers are illegal on public roads, whether the road is paved or not. Manufacturers insist on the operator using a helmet, and parents should supervise when children are driving. Signs on the vehicles clearly show that a three-wheeler is not designed to carry more than one person.

Anyone who rides on a public road, rides without a helmet or allows passengers, should have an idea of the risks being taken. Broken bones, internal injuries, serious head injuries and sometimes death are the result of careless and improper use of three-wheelers.

A three-wheeler turns and drives differently from a four-wheel drive vehicle or motorcycle. Many models have a straight axle joining the rear wheels. This means there is no gear that allows the rear wheels to spin at different speeds when the vehicle is turning a corner.

Steering a three-wheeler is a skill learned only through careful practice. Almost any rider will have a hard time controlling a three-wheeler at high speeds.

Some falls or overturns can be expected as part of the three-wheeling experience. But serious accidents are not an acceptable part of any sport or pastime.

Chamber's A.M. meet scheduled

Bill Benson, executive director of the Mississippi Sheriffs' Boys and Girls Ranches, Inc. will be the guest speaker at the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce's Morning Edition coffee Thursday, March 31 from 7:30 to 8:29 a.m. at La Villa Mexican Restaurant, Choctaw Plaza, Waveland.

Benson has been with the ranches since the inception of the program five years ago. He has served as executive director since 1981, working directly with the sheriffs of Mississippi and concerned citizens coordinating the development, promotion and growth of the ranch program throughout the entire state.

Benson, a native of Gadsden, Ala., holds a BA degree from Bethel College in McKenzie, Tenn.

The Boys and Girls Ranches were established in 1976 by the Mississippi Sheriffs' Association, and propose to be a non-profit organization dedicated to the care of Mississippi's homeless and abused children.

All funds to build, operate and maintain the childcare program come through voluntary contributions.

The objective of the Boys and Girls Ranches is to establish or create for children a home life and environment they have never had an opportunity to enjoy and experience, Benson noted.

Placement in this environment is of a permanent nature and children are thus received into care with the intention that this will become their home until they are old enough to assume responsibility for their own care as young adults, he added.

Only a limited number of spaces are available for placement of children who meet all eligibility requirements, the director said.

"We hope that all chamber members and guests will make an extra effort to be on hand for this most interesting and informative program," said Clarice Gustin, chamber executive director.

chitect fees.

Cuevas stated, "You're out of order!" Randolph said he would issue a report on what the board is paid in February travel expenses.

The superintendent said he would match that amount and 'donate the money to the children.'

Shaw replied, "You wouldn't donate very much based on mine (per diem reimbursement)."

Later in the meeting, Randolph again criticized the board for the house rebuilding project and cited several possible projects which could be undertaken at HNC with the funds including a classroom construction program.

"I feel this bickering is unnecessary. I don't know what the problem is. We should be thinking about the educational programs rather than the things we're talking about at this board meeting," he stated.

Billie Fay Lyons, a board member, said, "I think this board is concerned about our children's education."

Randolph again cited a need for the computer courses, a new HNC Elementary roof and new science laboratory.

Banks added, "When you're ready for it, I'm ready, 100 percent."

Cuevas said the principal's home is necessary to help provide night-time security at HNC.

REAL VIEWS ON REAL ESTATE

Dr. Dennis Tosh is holder of the J. Ed Turner Chair of Real Estate at The University of Mississippi.

BROKERAGE FRANCHISE

QUESTION: I have a successful real estate brokerage business that specializes in residential real estate. A number of national franchises have approached me about joining them, and I would appreciate any advice you might offer. S. S. Southaven, Dear S.S.:

Over the last few years, a number of real estate brokerage firms have joined various franchise operations which offer numerous advantages to those employed by the firm.

Certainly, a franchise operation offers tremendous exposure to its local operations through the various national advertising programs used by the franchise. Perhaps you recall television commercials advertising a particular franchise.

Training programs are also national in scope, with professional trainers employed to go from local firm to local firm offering various training program, sales seminars and marketing techniques.

There is, however, a cost to you for being part of a franchise operation. This cost is normally based on gross company sales, which means that your commission will be less since the franchise operation receives its percentage off the top.

You need to determine if the benefits derived from being a party of the franchise are worth the dollars it costs to join and maintain the franchise.

Another disadvantage is that your reputation suffers with bad publicity or bad personal feelings of another office. You might call on someone who recently moved to your city from another state.

They inform you that, "I'll never deal with anyone associated with XYZ Franchise because of the way I was treated when I sold my last house."

You had nothing to do with the bad treatment, but you are associated with the guilty party since both of you happen to work for brokerage firms that are part of the same franchise operation.

For answers to your questions, write Dr. Dennis Tosh, P. O. Box 295, University, MS 38677.

Federal safety group reports on defective heater valves

The Consumer Product Safety Commission has unanimously authorized its staff to issue an administrative complaint against Honeywell, Inc., of Minneapolis, Minn., which alleges that Honeywell's V8280 "family" of gas combination control valves contains defects which, when used with LP heating appliances, present a substantial risk of injury to the public from fires and explosions.

The complaint also charges that Honeywell knew of the hazard several years ago, yet failed to report it to the commission as required by law.

The commission has received reports of sixteen LP explosion incidents involving these valves — one involving death and many involving severe injuries to consumers.

The complaint seeks the recall of as many as 240,000 valves used in LP gas installations nationwide. It also seeks a $500,000 civil penalty from Honeywell for failing to report the hazard to the Commission as is required by law. This is the maximum fine that may be sought in such cases.

The complaint is limited to valves used in heating appliances fueled by LP gas. Since LP gas is heavier than air, it does not vent easily and tends to settle toward the floor, accumulate there, and may lead to an explosion when touched off by a nearby ignition source.

The combination valves serve the dual purpose of regulating the gas supplied to the appliance and the safety function of shutting off the gas supply when the pilot light is extinguished.

The complaint alleges that the design of the valves' stop mechanism is defective. It maintains that certain controls made between 1961 and 1974 have knobs that can become stuck down in the "ON" position. When the knob is stuck down in the "ON" position, the internal safety valve of the control may be defeated.

If the safety valve does not work and the pilot light goes out, unburned gas will pour into the furnace when the thermostat calls for heat. This gas can accumulate around the furnace and explode if an ignition source, such as a spark or flame from a water heater or sump pump, is present.

The legal action affects 31 different gas control models within the V8280 design family. The controls that are the subject of the complaint may be identified by the name Honeywell, located on the control near the on-off knob.

The controls will have a "PILOTSTAT" number and a model number ink-stamped on the side of the valve. The complaint identifies the following controls as allegedly containing a substantial product hazard.

Consumers wishing to check their heating appliances for these valves should exercise caution: If any odor of leaking gas is present, consumers should not attempt to locate the valve, but should instead immediately contact their gas supplier for assistance.

Consumers should be careful not to use matches or any other ignition source which could cause any accumulated gas to explode.

Consumers with a control knob that is stuck down in the "ON" position should immediately contact their gas supplier, and then call the Commission's toll-free hotline.

The Commission is seeking complaint and incident data concerning gas control valves and encourages consumers to report this information to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission's toll-free hotline at 800-638-CPSC. A teletypewriter number for the hearing impaired is 800-638-8270.

Every day, more than 107,000,000 Americans — seven out of 10 — read a daily newspaper. Every week nine out of 10 adults read at least one newspaper.

About 165,000 (38%) of the more than 432,000 people employed by U.S. newspapers are production workers.

STEREO SIMULCAST

The Los Angeles Philharmonic's tour of Japan provides a colorful backdrop for the first two performances in a special series of four concerts conducted by Maestro Carlo Maria Giulini and scheduled to air over the Public Broadcasting Service on April 6 and 13, 9-10 p.m. "The Giulini Concerts II" —Giulini in Japan— is presented by a major grant from Getty Oil Company. The concerts will be simulcast in stereo over radio stations throughout the country.

The April concert performances were videotaped at the famed Osaka Festival Hall in May, 1982, during the Philharmonic's 12-concert tour of Japan and South Korea.

GEOLOGIC EVENTS

Earthquakes and volcanoes —two geologic events that have long baffled and terrified mankind— are examined on the next new "National Geographic Special."

"Born of Fire," the fourth and final program in the 1983 season of "National Geographic Specials," can be seen at 8 p.m., Wednesday, April 6, on the Mississippi ETV Network.

National Geographic cameras travel around the world to sites of several of history's most cataclysmic geologic disasters. The violence and destruction of earthquakes and volcanic eruptions have plagued and perplexed people through the ages. Only recently has the modern science of plate tectonics enable scientists to fully understand how and why such events occur. Visits to sites where the action of plate movement is readily apparent and footage of past natural disasters dramatically illustrate how science is "on the move."

On a walk through the past, National Geographic cameras comb the ruins of a Bronze Age town preserved in volcanic ash. The disappearance of the civilization that flourished there and the cataclysmic destruction of the island have led some scholars to suggest that this may have been the fabled lost Atlantis.

Newspaper advertising revenues again led all major media, reaching another new high of $17.4 billion — more than that of television and radio combined.

of interest to VETERANS

Under a recent policy change, the Veterans Administration now allows GI loans for houses or condominiums in retirement communities or other developments with age restrictions. According to a VA headquarters spokesman, the new philosophy is based on the higher average age and changing needs of the veteran population.

VA-guaranteed home loan applications ran about 8,000 per month nationwide in 1981, when the GI mortgage rate averaged 16 percent. There were 18,447 applications in October 1982, when the rate was 12 1/2 percent. The interest rate for VA-guaranteed home loans has declined since.

Since the first GI Bill of Rights was enacted in 1944, the VA has backed nearly 12 1/2 million mortgages to veterans for housing worth over $201 billion. Currently, the average loan is about $60,000 on a $65,000 property for 30 years. The monthly payment comes to $617, principal and interest; taxes and insurance are added on.

Eligible veterans can get FHA loans requiring lower down payments than under other FHA programs. Veterans also have preference for processing of loans on farms and homes in towns up to 10,000 population from the Farmers Home Administration (FmHA). Some states, notably California and Oregon, offer veterans better home-loan terms than the federal programs.

Veterans can get more information and assistance from any American Legion Post or Veterans Administration Office. — Al Keller Jr., National Commander.

ing event are Lucy Ondrejka, Bay St. Louis potter-painter, and Elwood Collins, Bay St. Louis woodcarver. The meeting, slated for 7:30 p.m. is free and open to the public. (Echo staff photo by Wayne Ducomb Jr.)

Government product grading proves useful shopping aid

By ANN O. RUSHING
Extension Marketing
Specialist
Mississippi Cooperative
Extension Service

When grocery shopping, be aware of the various government grade names found on products.

Because they indicate the quality of products, they are useful shopping aids. The U.S. Department of Agriculture has set certain standards for grading the quality of beef, poultry, butter and eggs. In addition, USDA grades sometimes appear on canned and frozen vegetables, cheddar cheese and nonfat dry milk.

Foods are graded on the basis of physical characteristics such as texture, appearance and color of the food product — not nutritive value. Grading services are done on a voluntary basis.

Food grades may appear only on those foods that have been officially graded by the USDA. The manufacturers or packers requesting this service must meet strict requirements for cleanliness and sanitation.

In addition to grading foods for quality, the USDA inspects meat and poultry products for wholesomeness. The round USDA inspection stamp indicates the product has been federally inspected and is safe for consumption. Generally the stamp is found only on wholesale cuts of meat, but smaller retail cuts may have it as well. Fish and shellfish are inspected for wholesomeness by the U.S. Department of Commerce.

Have you noticed that a list of all ingredients does not appear on all food labels? This is because the FDA has established standards of identity for some foods — bread, mayonnaise and ketchup are examples. These foods, to be labeled and sold by their common names, must contain certain specified ingredients.

While compliance with the FDA standards is mandatory, food companies may add more of one ingredient or a combination of other ingredients to differentiate their products from other brands. Some manufacturers will voluntarily list all ingredients found in standardized foods.

The open dates used on food packages help you to judge the freshness of a product. In order to use these dates effectively, it's important that you understand their various meanings. The "sell by" or "pull date" frequently found on bakery goods, dairy products and other perishable foods indicates the last day the product can be sold in the supermarket.

If it is still safe for home consumption after this date, however, the "use by" date often found on refrigerated doughs and processed meats suggests the date after which the food will no longer be at its peak of freshness. The "pack date" usually found on canned goods and packaged foods is the date the product was packed or processed by the manufacturer. The "expiration date" is the last day the product should be used. It is frequently seen on baking powder and yeast.

A small rectangular form consisting of closely spaced lines, bars and a series of ten numbers is called the Universal Product Code or UPC. The first five numbers indicate the manufacturer of the item. The second five describe the item, its weight and price. As you reach the supermarket checkout, the food items are passed over a scanning device which identifies that item to the store computer and instantly records the information on an itemized receipt for you.

Through accreditation, school staff and faculty members will benefit by knowing that conditions for teaching in accredited schools meet certain minimum standards and that efforts are continuously made to improve these conditions. Regional standards require adequate facilities and facilities and their effective use.

Citizens are assured of accountability and of value for their tax dollars through the process of standard setting and the regular reevaluation of SACS member institutions. Communities with accredited schools can be confident that their institutions compare favorably with others in the region.

Accredited schools are a "plus" for those who are interested in relocating their families and businesses. Founded in 1895, the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools is one of six regional accrediting bodies in the United States.

More than 11,000 member public and private universities, colleges, junior colleges, occupational institutions, secondary schools, middle schools, and elementary schools enroll approximately five million students.

OLA Ensemble to serenade Hancock Library Friends

By JOE PILET
Coordinator
Friends of the Library

A talented group of young singers, students from Our Lady's Academy with superior ratings, are scheduled to perform on Thursday, April 7, at the City-County Public Library.

The performance will be by Friends of the Library.

The repertoire includes an ensemble entitled "Music Through the Ages," also a sextet and a trio. The group's accompanist is Mary Howard.

Following the musical, Nadine Stamm who serves as docent for April will present three Hancock County artists: Ellsworth Collins, a wood carver of note; Carl Baldenhofer, an artist and instructor of art; and Lucy Ondrejka who excels both in pottery craftsmanship and in portraiture.

Ondrejka studied portraiture with Connie Marlow and Arden Von de Witz in California and pottery at the Reseda School, also in California.

She is a graduate of the John McCrady School of Fine Arts in New Orleans.

Baldenhofer is well known in this area where he taught art under the sponsorship of RSVP and later organized a group of students and others interested into the Hancock County Art Association.

His students' works have been shown at the City Hall in Bay St. Louis, the libraries in both Bay St. Louis and Waveland and at the American Legion Hall.

For outstanding services to the community Baldenhofer has been recognized with the Governor's Distinguished Service Award (1978) and the American Legion Award in 1982.

Interested persons are invited to attend this well-balanced program, sponsored by Friends of the Library.

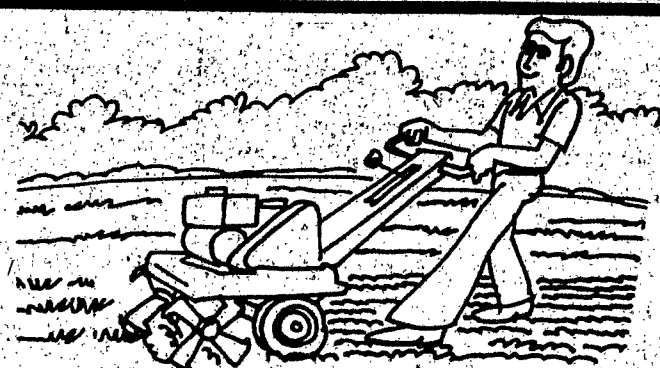

There is no charge for admission.

Stamm will serve as hostess in the Crawford Memorial Room immediately following the program.

ETV BRIEF

CHRISTIAN'S CHEF

Chef Roland Huet of Christian's restaurant in New Orleans likes to add a touch of creativity to the menu. "We try to innovate every day," says Huet, who is the tenth chef profiled on "Great Chefs of New Orleans" Thursday, March 31, on WYES/12.

The program will be repeated Saturday, April 2, at 10 a.m.

Seafood dishes are highlighted items at Christian's, and Huet begins his menu by combining two New Orleans favorites—red fish and crawfish.

The mousseline of Redfish Nantua uses quite a bit of whipping cream, about a quart for one pound of fish. Huet shows how the food processor can expedite what could be a long and boring job for the home cook.

He stresses keeping the mousseline cold as it is prepared.

Chef Huet's unusual Chicken Blackberry Vinegar began as an idea given him by a friend in his native France. The blackberry vinegar is made by soaking one part blackberries in two parts of white vinegar, but straining out all of the pulp and seeds is important.

The dish appears on the menu at Christian's as a selection of the chef. Christian's is located in a former church building, but derives its name from its owner, Chris Ansel, one of the New Orleans Galatoire family.

Ansel and Huet are more like friends and colleagues than owner and employee, and the restaurant's menu is the result of this happy alliance.

of interest to VETERANS

The 1980 census showed the veterans population to be 5 percent below earlier estimates. The Veterans Administration has revised its breakdown by service period accordingly. For lack of data, it will no longer provide figures on U.S. veterans living outside the United States (including Puerto Rico).

Using revised figures, VA put the number of living wartime veterans at the start of fiscal year 1983 at 24.2 million, a decline of 380,000 from the adjusted total for a year earlier. It said the World War I generation fell by 63,000 to 383,000 survivors; World War II vets diminished by 282,000 to 11.2 million, while those with initial service during Korea dropped 33,000 to 4.3 million.

The Vietnam-era group actually grew by 45,000 as middle-aged military careerists retired to civilian life and mortality remained low. The number of Spanish-American War veterans, on the other hand, dwindled from 84 to 54 during the fiscal year.

Of the 28.5 million wartime and peacetime veterans, 2.3 million were receiving compensation for service-connected disabilities. Among wartime veterans, 822,635 were receiving pension based on non-service-connected total disability and financial need.

THE ABUNDANT LIFE

By Shawn Murphy
MINISTER, BAY ST. LOUIS CHURCH OF CHRIST

"Meanwhile Jesus stood before the governor, and the governor asked him, 'Are you the King of the Jews?' 'Yes, it is as you say,' Jesus replied. When he was accused by the chief priests and the elders, he gave no answer. Then Pilate asked him, 'Don't you hear how many things they are accusing you of?' But Jesus made no reply, not even to a single charge—to the great amazement of the governor."

"While Pilate was sitting on the judge's seat, his wife sent him this message: 'Don't have anything to do with that innocent man... What shall I do, then, with Jesus who is called Christ?' Pilate asked. They all answered, 'Crucify him!'"

"...he (Pilate) took water and washed his hands in front of the crowd. 'I am innocent of this man's blood,' he said. 'It is your responsibility!'"

(Matthew 27:11-24)

WHAT WILL YOU DO WITH JESUS?
Pilate faced the chief priests and elders with a real problem! He had custody of Jesus, and he didn't know how to handle the situation! He could set a prisoner free, but the mob asked for a robber instead of Jesus. He had to take some action, and couldn't see an easy way out!

This question has confronted all those who have come in contact with Christ and His gospel! The gravity of the question, and how you and I respond to it, has our eternal destiny hanging in the balance. And avoiding the issue, is really not avoiding the problem! For no one can escape Pilate's dilemma. That is, "What will I do with Jesus?"

Pilate decided, "I'll wash my hands!" He wanted to remain neutral, but that was impossible. There is no middle ground or "No-man's-land" with Christ! Jesus said in Matthew's account "You are either with me or against me!"

The Jews were quick to answer, "Let him be crucified!" Yet some contend that because we were not there yelling "Crucify him" in the first century, that we are not guilty of his blood as the Jews were. And yet Jesus made it plain that he died for the sins of the whole world. (John 3:16)

Judas betrayed the one who was to die for Judas' sins. For the price of purchasing a wounded slave he sold out the Son of God!

Peter had been forewarned of denying the Lord; but when asked if he was one of the Lord's disciples he plainly and audibly said, "I don't know the man!"

The rich young ruler came to Jesus with the question: "What shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?" But when Jesus told him that he must go and sell all his possessions he walked away sad!

But there was one who answered correctly.

Jesus was being led away to be crucified, and seemingly stumbled beneath the weight

"I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly."

—John 10:10

of the heavy, ponderous cross: "And as they came out, they found a man of Cyrene, Simon by name: him they compelled to bear his cross." (Matthew 27:32)

This burden may have been forced upon him, and yet I like to think that this man was willing to say, "I'll gladly bear his cross!"

What will you do with Jesus? Ignore Him? Claim ignorance? Continue to crucify Him by continuing in sin? Sell Him out? Deny Him? Walk away sad?

Jesus said, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me." (Lk. 9:23) Again he said, "And he that taketh not his cross, and followeth after me, is not worthy of me." (Matt. 10:38)

Through the centuries the cause of Christ spread over the world because there were loving disciples willing to bear the cross for Christ.

So, friend, it is up to you! "What shall I then do with Jesus who is called Christ?" Heaven awaits your answer!

Portrait of Hancock Bank's Seal reveals self-made man

By BONNY WHITE

Special to The Sea Coast Echo
courtesy of
Gulfport Star Journal

"If you like people then banking's a good business to be in," the man said. "to see the little businesses catch on, grow, and prosper —just to think that you were a part in enabling some person to accomplish the mission he set out on, and to make the community a better place gives you a fine feeling. I don't know anything else I'd rather do."

We were in a sitting room on the seventh floor of the new Hancock Bank Building where Leo W. Seal Jr. leaned back in a comfortable arm chair, stretched his solid 6 foot-3 inch ex-Mississippi State tackle's frame, and talked about the business he's been in for 35 years.

He talked about the past, present, and projected future of the Mississippi Gulf Coast, Hancock Bank, and also of his personal philosophy of life.

He talked about people, places, banking and his keen blue-gray eyes reflected his high interest and love for his work.

"When I was a boy," he continued, "I wanted to work in the bank, but my father wouldn't let me. He told me he wanted me to be absolutely sure that's what I wanted to do before I came in."

So, as a teenager growing up in Bay St. Louis, he tried his hand at a variety of jobs to earn his spending money.

"I worked in a fish market unloading shrimp, oysters, crabs, and fish. Then I ran a fish route into Picayune and Poplarville to neighborhood grocery stores," he said, "and I learned that you can make a lot of money in selling if you go about it right, but I never found selling as interesting as banking," he said.

After trying his hand at selling, he tried his feet at climbing. "I went up many a pole for the telephone company," he remembered with a laugh.

He worked in construction at the Navy base, drove laundry routes, and pumped gas at service stations.

"That was back when pumping gas was literally pumping gas," he chuckled.

All of these varied jobs played an important part in the early years of the future president of Hancock Bank. They helped develop industry and a keen insight into human nature which would carry over into his career in banking and finance.

"Every one of those jobs was a learning experience," he said. "When I worked in the fish market, the old gentleman who owned it only had a second grade education, yet I learned a tremendous amount from that man about character. He was constantly telling me and all the other young people to get all the education we could get. He regretted his lack of it, yet he had tremendous common sense and he was a good businessman. I feel fortunate to have gone through all those experiences."

Seal's most sobering experience was the years he spent in the Army during World War II. His college education was interrupted, and when he resumed it, he was a very different young man.

"I discovered how really little I knew," he said. "After coming in contact with so many people and places I discovered I hadn't even scratched the surface in learning what needed to be learned."

When he returned to Mississippi State after the war, he felt that he had gained tremendously by the exposure his 'war education' had provided.

He feels that the best thing a college education does for you is to teach you to think.

"In the early years," he said, "the essentials of reading, writing, and arithmetic cannot be over emphasized. It seems that we have more sophistication in early education now, but as far as the nuts and bolts of things —I'm not sure they know as much as we did."

For the college student considering a career in banking and finance, ironically, Seal suggests engineering.

"The basic engineering courses with a high concentration of math, physics, and chemistry challenge the thinking process. If you know how to use your mind, you can transfer the problem solving process to anything you put your mind on," he said with the strong feeling which accompanies a banking and finance major with all of his electives in engineering.

Leo Seal is a very independent, strong-minded man. He has climbed the ladder of success much like he did those telephone poles in his younger years. He's gone up —one step at a time— at his own pace and in his own way.

Putting himself through State on a football scholarship and earning his own money, he refused to take any support funds from his parents.

"I didn't feel like I could call on my folks to educate me. My father had made his way, and I felt that I'd dishonor him if I tried to say 'take care of me.' I'm sure he would have, but I felt that if my father had done what he had done, I ought to endeavor to do the same thing."

After graduating from State, he began working at Hancock Bank.

"I've done every job in the bank," he said, "from runner on up to running the bank."

When Seal began as a runner, Hancock was a much smaller bank worth about $14 million. There was a branch in Gulfport, one in Bay St. Louis, and one in Pass Christian. Today Hancock Bank boasts assets of some $450 million, serving southern Mississippi in 18 locations from Edgewater to Poplarville.

"It's difficult for people coming into the industry now to get as good a grasp of the banking business as those who came in when it was small," he said thoughtfully. "In those times you had to wear six or eight hats because if someone got sick, someone else had to go in there and pick up the slack. I feel very fortunate in getting in on the ground floor. I feel for every employee in the organization because I've done every job and I know that there are no unimportant jobs in the bank. If anyone on any level doesn't do his job right, then somebody has to come behind him and pick up his marbles."

He looked away as though he were reliving a scene early in his banking career when he began to talk of his years as a loan officer.

"Back in '50 or '51, I had some young people come in, their father had died and they were trying to take over the business," he said still looking into the distance.

"They outlined to me what they could do with some additional equipment, and we had confidence in them, thought they had a solid background and were willing to work, and we've seen that business grow into a million dollar enterprise."

"Of course, they all aren't that way," he signed, as he came back to the present.

"In the banking business you have a lot of challenges, and you make some mistakes along the way but you have to have a positive outlook. If you don't, the world can crumble around you. If you get up in the morning and try to find something wrong with the world you can find it, but you don't have to find any of that."

If you get up and say, 'Well, it's gonna be another good day' and just think about things good that can happen to you, a lot of good things happen. Conversely if you get up every morning and look for the bad things you can find them. But, that's just too much wear and tear on you. Life's too short to go around trying to make yourself unhappy."

That basic positive philosophy of life coupled with hard work and a keen observation of people and circumstances appears to be the basic thread of Leo Seal's "garment of success."

He has worn that garment well, and the Coast has benefited immeasurably from his efforts.

Today the Port of Gulfport has increased 10 times in volume handled, largely through the talents of this positive thinking banker.

He was named the most outstanding young man in the state in 1958 in recognition of his success in pushing the change of ownership of the port from city to state.

He was elected state president of the Chamber of Commerce and served as president of both the Young Bankers (1961) and the Senior Section of the Mississippi Bankers Association (1974).

His efforts to unify the Coast and help the area's economy recover after Camille will long be remembered by those benefiting from this prompt action.

For the future of his bank, Seal hopes to continue its growth, progress, and reputation on the same track it enjoyed under his father.

WORLD'S LARGEST TOOL—A large section of a Space Shuttle external tank is readied by Martin Marietta Aerospace technicians for welding in the world's largest weld lathe. The lathe is 33 feet tall, 166 feet long, weighs 400,000 pounds and yet it welds sections within tolerances of 20 thousandths of an inch. This machine is one of several used to assemble the Shuttle tanks at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Michoud Assembly Facility in New Orleans, La. Martin Marietta manufactures one external tank for each Space Shuttle flight. The number of flights is increasing and Martin Marietta is increasing its tank production rate to 24 per year by 1987. Martin Marietta fabricates the external tanks under contract to NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center, Huntsville, Ala.

Louisiana FM station plans Zydeco, Cajun music festival

WVOZ Radio is producing a Festival of Cajun and Zydeco music in a series of four live concerts during April.

The programs will be broadcast over 90.7FM as the urban fais-do-do gets underway at the popular dancehall Tipitinas, 501 Napoleon Avenue in New Orleans.

The station has broadcast cajun and zydeco records since it first went on the air in 1981.

Initially starting with one weekly program, there are now four weekly programs that feature the music of French Louisiana.

Two of the shows are hosted by fans of the music, one is hosted by an accordion-playing cajun bandleader and one by a cajun woodworker and accordion maker.

WVOZ has broadcast some of the French bands that do regularly appear at clubs in New Orleans.

This series offers a rare opportunity to hear and dance to bands that are currently a part of the living dancehall tradition of the Louisiana Prairie.

Opening the Festival Friday, April 1, will be Marcel Dugas and the Entertainers, an eight piece Zydeco and Blues band.

The following Friday, April 8, direct from Fred's Lounge in Mamou, Ambrose Thibodeaux, the grand old man of traditional French accordion, will open for Don Montoucet and the Wandering Aces, a five piece group, with a 10-year-old triangle player.

April 15, two groups from Scott will be performing. Accordionist Felix Richard will appear with a trio which includes his well known student Zachary Richard.

Modern French dance band, The Scott Playboys, under the leadership of Walter Monton, will bring their special blend of C&W Swing, to the two step. The final weekend, Mike Doucet, fiddler with Beausoleil, will open with a set of a cappella traditional Acadian songs.

Friday, April 22, Leo Thomas and his French Soul Band from Elton will close out the series with a hot show featuring Thomas' melodic zydeco drumming.

These programs are sponsored by The National Endowment for the Arts, Folk Arts Program, Washington, D.C., The Louisiana State Arts Council through the division of the Arts, and Old Style Beer.

REAL VIEWS ON REAL ESTATE

MOBILE HOME BOOM
QUESTION: I have noticed with interest the recent reference to manufactured housing rather than mobile homes. They seem to have become very popular and I wondered if this popularity is expected to continue? B. G. Jackson, Dear B. G.:

More than a change in name has spurred the rapid growth in the manufactured housing industry. According to the 1980 Federal Housing Act, manufactured housing is now the official term used to describe what once was called a trailer or mobile home.

Sales have grown 15 percent during each of the last two years and projections for the future indicate continued growth. Several reasons for this increased popularity can be offered.

The appearance of manufactured houses more closely resembles that of site-built homes. Today, manufactured houses look permanent when placed on a lot. Sidewalks, attached carports, decks and other such features have added to this permanent appearance.

Permanent financing is becoming more rapidly available. A manufactured home purchaser can finance the purchase through FHA or VA programs. In addition, commercial lenders are not as reluctant to finance these homes as was once the case.

Purchasing prices are lower. As sales have increased, manufacturers have been able to price their homes at competitive levels. Current prices are certainly attractive when compared to detached housing.

Population growth has been occurring in areas of the country where mobile homes traditionally have been accepted. This has been especially true in the Sun Belt, most notably parts of Texas and Florida.

Finally, manufactured homes currently appeal to a wider market than ever before. As this trend continues, this manufactured home has become the started house for more and more first-time homebuyers as well as the last home for employees who no longer need need as much space.

INTEREST-FREE LOANS

QUESTION: I recently read a real estate ad which offered an interest-free loan by the builder. Was this really interest, and if so, how does it work? R. K. Hattiesburg, Dear R. K.:

Some builders in this state and in the rest of the country as well are offering a unique incentive to new homebuyers—interest-free loans. This method of selling homes is not without risks, and you should examine the particulars very closely prior to agreeing to such an arrangement.

The normal arrangement requires one-third of the purchase price as a downpayment. The remaining balance is then paid over a period of five years with all payments credited to the principal.

Obviously, such a high downpayment eliminates many buyers since the average downpayment is not this great. In addition, few buyers are able to completely repay the remaining balance in only five years. For most of us, a minimum repayment period of 15 years is needed. These mortgages are assumable, and designed to aid in the current inflationary period. Toward this end they have been somewhat successful.

A potential disadvantage is that the buyer may be getting a contract for deed or an installment sales contract at the closing of the purchase contract and not a clear title to the property.

What this means is that the builder/seller will continue to hold the title to the property until the loan is paid in full. For the buyer, the result may be a loss of whatever monies have been paid if the complete payment is not made within the prescribed period of time.

Before considering such financing, have a lender fully explain how the process works so that you will understand what is expected from you.

Money Talk

By Norine Barnes

Impulsive/Compulsive Spending
Impulsive spending is spur-of-the-moment purchasing of something that is not needed and that was not planned to be purchased. An example of impulsive spending might be a person in a department store who sees a wall hanging with a catchy phrase. The person thinks, "My, isn't that cute" and though the shopping trip was intended for the purchase of something else, the person buys the wall hanging as well.

While impulsive spending is on a whim, or a spontaneous desire of the moment, compulsive spending is more a long-term pattern of purchases that serve to fulfill some deep personal need. There are many different compulsive spending patterns. One pattern of compulsive spending is seen with people who frequently become depressed and who, in order to make themselves feel better, go out and "blow" some money on unneeded items.

Another common pattern of compulsive spending is found in people who have feelings of inferiority and who compensate by dressing in the latest fashions, driving flashy cars, and buying all kinds of showy things to create an image of success and well-being. Often these people are not very successful financially and they go deep in debt trying to keep up with, or ahead of, the "Joneses."

Both of these patterns, impulsive and compulsive, can be causes of financial problems. More important, is the fact that these patterns, if they persist, can ruin the best planned rehabilitative spending plan.

Solutions. Look for any indication of compulsive or impulsive spending patterns. When evidence of either is found, it is wise to discuss the effect of the pattern on your financial plan. It should be emphasized that if the pattern is not broken, it may ruin any attempts at developing a plan to get your financial situation straightened out.

Some compulsive spending habits may have very deep and hidden origins. If you are unable to break the pattern, it may be necessary to recommend some kind of therapist. If the success of your financial recovery depends on breaking a long-term pattern, a psychologist, psychiatrist, or family counselor may be the only kind of professional with the training to effective help.

Lack of Sales Resistance. We are all aware of those super-special salespeople who could "sell ice cubes to an Eskimo." Many people are "suckers" for a good sales pitch, or they are looking for something for nothing. P. T. Barnum probably summed up this problem best by saying, "There's a sucker born every minute, and two to take 'em." Many people seeking help with financial problems have debts that were unwisely contracted.

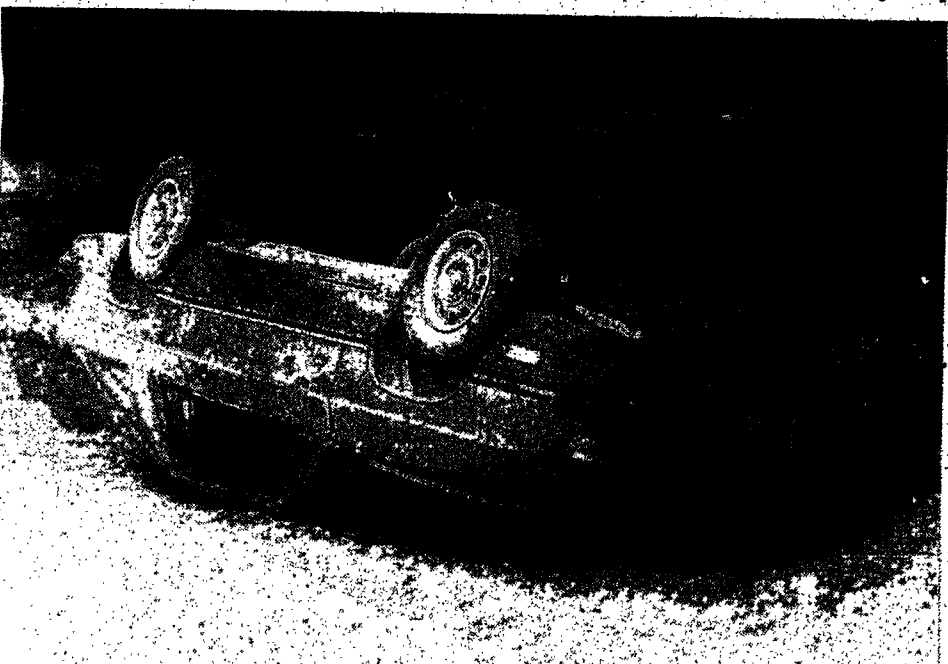

It is best to develop enough sales resistance to avoid further "unwise purchases." One big "unwise deal" could be enough to ruin a well-planned rehabilitative financial plan.

Solutions. Some of the types of debts consumers get involved in may have been contracted by illegal or unethical means. In cases where this is suspected, contact the appropriate agency or organization for assistance.

Try to build sales resistance to prevent further problems of being taken in by a smooth sales pitch or getting stuck with another unneeded "bargain."

FINALIST—Mrs. Norman Holden of Bay St. Louis was a finalist in a recent Buccaneer mobile home giveaway in Slidell, La. Finalists each drew a key at random—the one with the key that opened the door won. Virginia Wager of Madisonville won the home, and Mrs. Holden won $250 in gift certificates as a runner-up. Billy Whalen, right, of Carter Mobile Homes in Slidell presented the award.

NO ONE INJURED—No one was injured in this one-car accident that occurred on 26th Street in Shoreline Park. The driver, Edith Wheeler of Shoreline Park, hit a ditch and her car flipped over, according to investigator Dennis Tartavouille of the Hancock County Sheriff's Department. Tartavouille said Mrs. Wheeler crawled out of the car on her own power and had some facial lacerations but wouldn't go to the hospital. (Staff photo by Beards Snellings).

Some foods are dangerous when mixed with drugs

By PHILIP BREEZE
Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service

A mixture of high blood pressure medication and cheddar cheese can be more dangerous than the fearsome combination of gasoline and alcohol.

When certain drugs are prescribed, various foods become proscribed, forbidden.

Susie Overstreet, health education specialist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service, said one drug commonly prescribed to combat high blood pressure or depression can become deadly when mixed with aged or fermented foods.

"Perhaps the most hazardous food-drug interaction is the one between monoamine oxidase inhibitors and aged or fermented foods."

"When MAO, which is used to treat high blood pressure and depression, is mixed with sharp or aged cheeses, yogurt, sour cream, pickled herring, soy sauce, beer, Chianti, or some types of sausage and salami, the reaction can force blood pressure to dangerous levels. Severe headaches, brain hemorrhage, even death can result," Miss Overstreet said. Other drug-food reactions may not be quite as drastic or as rapid, but should be guarded against nonetheless.

"Persons who are taking anticoagulants should avoid foods high in Vitamin K, such as leafy vegetables and liver," Miss Overstreet said.

The body uses vitamin K to promote clotting of blood, it will work against the anticoagulant drugs. Tetracycline, a common antibiotic, is hampered by dairy products.

Many effects of drugs are diminished when taken with soft drinks, fruit juices or vegetable juices.

The stomach acid these liquids cause allow the medication to dissolve in the stomach rather than in the intestines, where it can be more readily absorbed into the bloodstream.

Miss Overstreet advised individuals on medication to read carefully the directions that accompany it, and to follow closely any instructions on the bottle and those given by physicians.

And, of course, avoid alcoholic beverages when using any medication.

MISSISSIPPI
HEALTHY BUT...
Is Mississippi really a healthy place to live?

Well — er, yes, but... Not all the time. You see, Mississippi for some reason has suffered three times as many deaths from tornadoes as any of her neighboring states lately. Mississippi over the past 20 years has recorded 233 deaths from tornadoes while Louisiana had 74; Arkansas, 96; Tennessee, 24; Alabama, 98; Georgia, 46; and Florida, 42.

A bum rap that — but that's not all. Tropical storms find the coastal regions bordering the Gulf and Atlantic Coasts as the most vulnerable of any areas of the U.S. California's recent experiences notwithstanding.

The same tropical storm zone also shows the greatest proneness to allergy problems.

If there wasn't another side to this health coin I might really wonder why my great-grandfather Benjamin packed up his young family in 1906 and boarded the Mississippi River steamer Prince to commence a short voyage to Vicksburg on a physician's advice to seek a warmer climate than the one he left behind in Tennessee.

He was right. It is hotter in Mississippi — with an average of 99 days annually that the temperature reaches or exceeds 90 degrees. The sun shines here 61 percent of the time, and our winds average 7.8 miles per hour with most of that occurring as cold winter winds and less of it as cooling summer breezes.

Such is the bad news. Most of the rest is good, according to Dr. Robert Shalman's book, "Where You Live May Be Hazardous To Your Health."

And at least you shouldn't have to worry much about earthquakes — unless you live in the Mississippi delta where this state's earthquake risk factor switches from minor to moderate.

Agriculture plays a major role in keeping all around health factors for Mississippi on the plus side. The air is much cleaner here than most places when it comes to sulfur pollution and particulates, the latter being plain ol' dirt in the air.

Central Mississippi records only 12 grams per cubic meter of sulfur dioxide in the air compared with a U.S. average of 80 grams — or 58 in Chicago and 15 in New Orleans. However, we don't do so hot on that "suspended particulate" business in the air. We score 105 compared to a national average of 75 — or 154 in Chicago and 79 in New Orleans.

Mississippians get zapped pretty good with the major allergens stemming from such sources as elm, oak and pecan trees in springtime, bermuda and johnson grasses throughout summer and fall, and burweed and ragweed among others mostly in the autumn.

Thunderstorms visit the Magnolia state about 62 days out of every year with threats to our well-being through lightning strikes, trees blown over, downed power lines, and the like. And that's sorta scary.

But closing out on a happier note, Mississippians get along with Mississippians better than a lot of folks in other parts. Our personal crime incidents occur at the rate of 227 annually for each 100,000 population — compared with 397 as a national average, 671 in Chicago and 658 in the Crescent City.

Mississippians however are not quite as fortunate when it comes to the thieving bit, as we register 2,059 property crimes per 100,000 population compared with 2,241 in Chicago and 3,275 in New Orleans.

Still the sun shines on us Magnolia Staters 61 percent of the time and we can count on the dust being settled on 51 of those 365 days of the year.

Book Review

History of Piney Woods School.
A new book entitled "Piney Woods School: An Oral History" by Alferdeen Harrison has been published by the University Press of Mississippi.

It is the story of the school and of the enduring people of Piney Woods Community in Rankin County, Mississippi.

"I have tried to show how they forged on against incredible odds to make a better world for themselves and their children," Dr. Harrison said.

The author, a Piney Woods School alumna, recounts how the school was able to develop under the guidance of Dr. Laurence Jones as an important educational training center.

Piney Woods School was founded in 1909 and was based upon the Booker T. Washington concept of providing both education and training for black students.

Dr. Harrison shows also why the school has appealed to a broad community which by 1978 helped Piney Woods to acquire an endowment of more than $12 million. She recounts how the current administration continues to foster a tradition of excellence and meets present-day challenges.

Dr. Harrison is a professor of history and director for the Institute for the Study of the History, Life, and Culture of Black People at Jackson State University.

She based her book upon archival records and upon a series of interviews with educators, former students, and members of Piney Woods Community.

Her book includes about fifty vintage photographs as well as a section of pictures taken at Piney Woods School by the well known photographer Roland Freeman.

"Piney Woods School: An Oral History" is available at $17.95 plus sales tax at book stores or from the publisher, University Press of Mississippi, 3825 Ridgewood Road, Jackson, MS 39211.

CNN METEOROLOGISTS

Weatherwise, a weekly behind-the-scenes look at the world of weather, has begun airing on CNN, Ch. 10 on Hancock Cable.

Meteorologists Flip Spiceland, Nick Gregory and Dallas Raines add an extra dimension to their forecasts by taking viewers beyond the satellite photographs and temperature readings for a look at some of the lesser-known aspects of weather.

Each week, Weatherwise will explore a different facet of meteorology.

Topics such as weather folklore, the impact of weather on people and their environment and the relation of weather patterns to geology and astronomy will be covered.

Viewers will also get an inside look at the state-of-the-art weather forecasting equipment used by CNN meteorologists.

High school thespians to kick-off Library Week

Opening night in the theater is always an exciting time and the evening of April 18 will likely be no exception when the Hancock County Library System presents the debut of several local high school dramatic groups.

Beginning at 7 p.m. in the City-County Library in Bay St. Louis, the Bay High Drama Club, sponsored by the Bay St. Louis Little Theatre, will perform scenes from "The Shadow Box," "The Good Doctor," and "Pretzels" starring Linda Carver, Pam deBen, Tanya Mitchell, George Paul, Wendy Tillman, and Thelma Walker.

The presentation will be directed by Mike Cuevas.

The St. Stanislaus Drama Club, under the direction of Dan Griffin, will perform Pirandello's one-act play

"The License" starring Ford Gaudin, Stacey Glindmeyer, Keith Mallini, Nolan Marchand, Mitzi Plessala, Patricia Schmidt, and John Tighe.

The Forensic Club of Our Lady's Academy will demonstrate some of the different competitions required by the National Forensic League.

Speakers will be Joelle Dupont and Lisa Kingston.

Socorro Alcala will perform a dramatic prose reading "The Toy Killer" and Evalina Alcala, Dayn Cox, and Chris Longo will recite the poems "Horton Hatches the Egg," "Patterns," and "Nothing to Wear."

Marilyn Dupont is the sponsor of the Club.

This "Evening of Drama" is the opening event of National Library Week festivities. The focus at the Hancock County Library System this year is service to young adults.
